

Definitions

- A transaction is defined as an electronic claim status request (276) submitted to the payer.
- A successful transaction is defined as a claim status request (276) for a claim where a response (277) is returned. The response may be that the claim is in process, paid, rejected or that there was an incomplete response due to the lack of patient or provider information in the request, etc. These responses will count towards the total number of successful transactions.
- An unsuccessful transaction is defined as a claim status request (276) for a claim where a response (277) is not returned at all. This can be due to system issues or connection problems. These transactions will not count towards the total number of transactions.

All transactions for payers where Office Ally is the designated clearinghouse will be provided free of charge (these payers are identified on our payer list by a notation in the Note column). Some payers require providers to complete pre-enrollment prior to being able to perform claim status requests. User is responsible to ensure that they have completed and payer has approved all necessary pre-enrollment prior to submitting claim status requests to these payers. Claim status requests that are incomplete due to a lack of patient or provider information/pre-enrollment are still defined as successful transactions and will be included in the total number of successful transactions for which the User is invoiced.
